BRITISH CALL NAZI ATTACKS FAILURES

Londoners Ridicule German Claims of Destruction

By H. R. Kniekerbocker
LONDON, August 17 — The "smoking ruins" of London exist only in the imagination of the German official news agency and today — the third week end in August and one of the last desirable dates for an invasion — the British people went about their holiday with more than their usual good nature.

They have good reason, because the German accounts of the current air raids as reproduced in London in today's afternoon newspapers are so incredibly fantastic that they are very funny.

Throughout the city the most popular pastime today was for one person to read aloud to a group the German agency's account of panic reigning in the city, with tens of thousands fleeing and screaming.

Literally the only screaming being done in London is screams of laughter at these insanely untrue stories.

There was not only no panic, but people everywhere disobeyed the rules during yesterday's raids in a vain attempt to see the German planes.

The fact is that British censorship harmed the British cause far more yesterday than did the German raiders because by preventing American news agencies and newspapers from sending accurate reports promptly, it forced the United States to accept the German version, and this had calamitous if only temporary results.

Hundreds of Americans in London received cables anxiously inquiring whether they were still alive and uninjured among Dr. Joseph Goebbels' "smoking ruins."

Let it be taken as the personal testimony of this correspondent that the damage done to material in all German air raids on the metropolis has been so small as to play no role whatever in whatever plans Chancellor Hitler may have for his prospective conquest, while the effect on British morale actually has been to lift it even higher than it was.

This is because experience in the last eight days of raids has convinced the British of what they formerly believed but were not quite sure of, namely, that the R. A. F. can permanently beat off the German luftwaffe.

Incidentally, for the guidance of American readers, let it be recorded that most American newspapermen and neutral professional observers believe the British air ministry's figures are as nearly humanly possible correct and they now show the R. A. F. knocking down the enemy at a ratio of four to one, the total of the last eight days (Continued on Page Eight)

Company Reported Planning Heavier Movement From Morrow To Trinway

Indications have been shown in the last week or two that the Pennsylvania Railroad that runs from Morrow to Trinway through Pickaway County may become more important during the next few months in the system's schedule of shipping.

Several high officials of the railroad have traveled through Circleville on tours of inspection, and much repair work has been started. The railroad's bridge over the Scioto River, west of Circleville, is being repaired, and several cars of steel have been moved into the county district.

Although local officials of the railroad have not been informed of any definite program, rumors have been circulated that the road's tracks will be reinforced to handle much heavier shipping. The Pennsylvania, known as the "Sheepskin" in this district, connects with the Panhandle Division at Trinway and connects with other lines at Morrow for traffic into Cincinnati.

NATION AWAITS ADDRESS

10,000 In Audience At High School For Informal Celebration

ELWOOD, Ind., August 17—A blitzkrieg of humanity engulfed Elwood today.

The first streaks of daylight found the city already rousing from a sleepless night, brought the clatter and roar of a half a hundred special trains and saw the highways in every direction black with automobiles.

Because of a cherished American tradition, an inheritance of the country's past, this normally peaceful community of 10,000 residents and the rolling countryside beyond became the meeting place of thousands; the focal point of the eyes and ears of the world.

Not only the mammoth throng assembled here, but millions throughout the United States and many in foreign lands were interested in "today in Elwood."

They were interested because of an old Yankee custom of notification ceremonies for a presidential nominee—a practice that originated when transportation was slow and hazardous and communication not so rapid.

Knows He's Candidate

Wendell L. Willkie has known for weeks that he was the Republican standard-bearer for 1940, but tradition must be served.

So the former Elwood boy came home today to be formally apprised of his nomination and make an acceptance speech of some 5,000 words. That address contained an outline of the nominee's political philosophy; it told how Willkie stands on the pressing questions of the hour.

The speech was the opening blast in Willkie's campaign. It (Continued on Page Eight)

REWARD OF $250 PAID TO FINDER OF MAN'S BODY

LOGAN, August 17 — Richard Laurence Butler, who discovered the body of Conrad H. Reichley, Hocking County "Santa Claus," has received the $250 reward offered by Hocking County commissioners for information leading to the finding of the aged Benton Township man.

Butler, who discovered the body on the farm of Ed Shaw when he was hunting crows, placed a claim for the reward a few days after the discovery. After commissioners had checked the legal aspects of the matter, they approved the payment and issued a voucher to Butler.

Reichley disappeared from South Bloomingville on March 4. From that time until the body was found by Butler at the bottom of a sandstone cliff, officers had been searching for the body. Investigators believed that the aged man had fallen off the cliff. His skull had been fractured.

Objective of Nazi Bombing Masses

THE greatly increasing fury of German air raids on the British Isles was brought sharply home to Londoners when 40 Nazi dive bombers and fighting planes bombed and strafed the famed Croydon airport, only eight miles from the city limits of the capital of the British Empire. Several persons were killed and hangars and other airport facilities were damaged.

Solons Ready To Okeh Reasonable British Deal

WASHINGTON, August 17—Key congressmen were ready today to approve any "reasonable" deal that President Roosevelt might make with Great Britain and Canada for their Western Hemisphere territories for use as United States defense bases.

This was apparent from an International News Service poll of leaders in both houses of congress following the President's statement he was carrying on negotiations with London and Ottawa in an attempt to bulwark the Western Hemisphere's ramparts against aggression.

Only senators of the "isolationist bloc" objected, holding such a transaction would further "entangle" this country in Europe's politics.

Several members of congress suggested that cancellation of Great Britain's $4,600,000,000 debt to the United States, contracted during the first World War, would be a fair price for British possessions in the Western Hemisphere.

Both the White House and the State Department, meanwhile, maintained silence as to the price America proposes to pay for naval and air rights on strategic points, such as the Bahamas, Barbados, British Honduras and sites along the Canadian coast.

While technical experts in the State, War and Navy Departments were being consulted, officials said the negotiations were being conducted by the President personally with Lord Lothian, the British ambassador, and Loring Christie, the Canadian minister.

Chairman Vinson (D) of the house naval affairs committee, asked about the President's negotiations, said:

"It is essential for the defense of the Panama Canal that we have outlying bases. The secretary of the navy has been given authority to establish these bases, and if it can best be done by negotiating with other countries it should be done in that way."

Chairman May (D) of the house military affairs committee added:

"I am one hundred percent for it, and I hope the negotiations will be quickly concluded."

HEAVIER RAIDS TO BE DIRECTED AT LONDON AREA

BERLIN, August 17 — London can expect more and heavier German air raids, a German government spokesman made it clear today.

Replying to a question whether the Germans consider London an open city, he said:

"What the German air force has done so far amounts only to mosquito bites when compared with what may be expected. "Since the British have attacked and dropped bombs on non-military objectives and open cities throughout Germany, this country is under no obligation to respect open cities in England."

HEART ATTACK FATAL TO F. H. DUMM IN COLUMBUS

Frank H. Dumm, 49, Columbus, a native of Pickaway County and brother of Miss Marie and Miss Leona Dumm, of Circleville, fell dead of a heart attack Friday afternoon in the back yard of the home of William E. Shackelford, 302 East Gates Street, where he was painting the house. Members of the fire department rescue squad failed to revive him after administering aid for 35 minutes.

He was a driver for the Shady Lane Milk Company. Besides his two sisters, Marie and Leona, he is survived by his widow, Clara; a daughter, Mrs. Mary Marie Barry; and three brothers, Roscoe L., Harry and William Dumm.

Seventy-Five Of Der Fuehrer's Bombers And Fighters Downed, With Empire Losing Only 22 In Great Battle, Ministry Claims

BERLIN, August 17—Nazi Germany today proclaimed a total blockade of the waters surrounding the British Isles, threatening to sink on sight ships of any nations attempting to maintain commerce with Britain.

Formal notes have been sent to all neutral nations, it was announced, warning them to keep their shipping out of the British war zone or risk destruction of their vessels.

LONDON, August 17—A large force of British bombers successfully attacked important objectives in Germany last night, it was announced today. Full reports are not yet available, but it is known that heavy damage was done to a hydrogenation plant near Leipzig.

The air ministry announced that Britain lost 22 planes yesterday, while 75 Nazi ships were downed.

LONDON, August 17—Residents of a southwestern London suburb dashed to air raid shelters today as loud explosions—the result of delayed action bombs—rent the air.

Inhabitants of the region, one of the Greater London districts raided yesterday by German planes, sought safety in the belief that the enemy planes had returned.

Authorities said, however, that the blasts were the result of delayed action missiles dropped by the Nazi raiders many hours previously.

In the meantime, German raiders carried out new attacks on various sections of Britain during the night and this morning. But British authorities termed the mass air bombardment of the greater London region a costly failure.

The first delayed-action bomb to burst exploded early in the morning in the rear garden of a house.

A second bomb exploded near some houses demolished in yesterday's raid an hour later.

A rescue worker and 10 other persons had been standing around the second bomb, without being aware it was "alive," only three minutes before it exploded.

Air raid precaution workers were busy in the raided area throughout the night with demolition work and guard duty, keeping passers-by away from areas where unexploded bombs are known to have fallen.

Crowds walked through the streets examining the wreckage. Almost every road in the central area of the attacked suburban district showed signs of damage, with glass and debris littering the streets for hundreds of yards from the points where the bombs struck.

Housing Big Problem

By early morning local authorities succeeded in finding housing facilities for all persons rendered homeless by the raids.

Squads of air raid precaution workers rapidly cleared away the debris and labored to make damaged structures safe for occupancy.

This afternoon an official British announcement said:

"Enemy air activity over this country last night was not on a heavy scale. Bombs were dropped on South Wales, where some damage was caused to property and a few casualties were caused."

"Bombs also were dropped on southeastern and southwestern England. A few persons were injured when some houses were damaged at a town in southwest (Continued on Page Eight)

HIGH SCHOOL COACHES CALL GRIDDERS TO REPORT TUESDAY AT 9 A. M.

12 YOUTHS WHO WON LETTERS TO BE IN UNIFORM

Drills To Start Wednesday;
Job Of Replacing Nine
Youngsters Faced

Circleville High School athletes who expect to compete for positions on the varsity football team this fall will gather at the school Tuesday at 9 a. m., to meet Coaches Roy Black and Tom Armstrong and receive equipment for practice sessions that will start in earnest the following day. The first game of the Tigers' nine-conference schedule will be on the home lot Friday, September 13, with Columbus' fighting Holy Rosary varsity providing the opposition.

Despite the loss of nine lettermen, several of whom filled key positions on the team, Coach Black, Saturday, declared that he expected to put a versatile and capable team on the field. "I believe that all of the boys around whom we expect to build the team this year will work for a single objective, that being to become parts of a winning combination," the mentor said.

He explained that most of the boys returning had gained experience last year and that with only one or two exceptions all of the youths had gained in weight.

12 Lettermen Return

He will have 12 lettermen returning, enough to put a veteran team on the field and have another lad hanging around the edges. But what makes the coach confident that a winner will be produced is that many boys who gained some experience, but not enough to win letters will be in the fold and ready to replace any of the veterans who slip.

Gone from last year's varsity are Harold Smith, captain and sparkplug of the 1939 aggregation; Paul Walters, Bob Bowsler, Tom Harden, Jim Shea, Melvin Thompson, Howard Orr, Hulise Hays and Hansel Warner.

Returning lettermen will include the following who will be seniors, Clark Martin, Russ Liston, Marvin Jenkins, Carl Eby, Bob Brown and Bill Thornton, and the following who will be juniors, John Sabine, Norman Anderson, Joe Staley, Frank Geib, Jim Moorehead and Paul Jackson.

Add to this list Jim Callahan, Harry Clifton, Richard Brintlinger, Bill Kochensperger, Dud Smallwood, Jack Hatzo, Dave Orr, Carl Bach, Bob Moon, Charles Zaenglein, Bob Goeller, Richard Binkley, Don Valentine, John Woods, Don Sowers, Virgil Wolfe, Jim Carr, Jack Crawford, Nolan Sims, George Trego and William Goeller, in addition to several others who may report, and you have the squad with whom Coaches Black and Armstrong will work.

Then, too, there will be a few boys up from the freshman class, who, with some training and experience, may break into action this year.

There is always a possibility that one or two, and sometimes more, boys turn up during a summer through change in address.

Seven on Home Field

Of the nine games on the schedule only two will be on the road, seven contests being scheduled under the lights of the school field. Holy Rosary, West Jefferson, Lancaster, Groveport, Hillsboro, Wilmington and Bremen will comprise the home schedule, with Greenfield and Washington C. H. will be met on foreign fields. Hillsboro, Wilmington, Greenfield and Washington C. H. will be South Central Ohio league jousts, while Bremen will be met Pumpkin Show week.

Of the nine teams against whom the Tigers will play, four will be under new coaches.

Some new equipment has been purchased for the squad, the Stooze Club putting out about $90 for new windbreakers, 20 being purchased. Six new head guards, six new blocking pads and six new shoulderpads have been purchased by the Athletic Association.

Coach Black urges that all boys report in the best condition possible because work will get under way Wednesday in earnest.

NEWPORT, R. I., August 17—Don McNeil of Oklahoma City, holder of the French championship and the American clay-court and inter-collegiate crowns, will clash with 20-year-old Frank Kovacs of Oakland, Cal., today in the first of the Newport tennis invitation challenge.

BOB Feller, stellar Cleveland Indian pitcher, is shown removing his uniform in the Cleveland dressing room after knocking off the Detroit Tigers to mark up his twentieth victory. Friday afternoon, Feller put the Indians three games ahead of the Tigers by defeating St. Louis while the Detroiters were losing again. The victory was No. 21.

Jimmie Foxx Smacks Two; Feller Adds To String

By Ed Kiely

NEW YORK, August 17—It's high time today that we doff the derby in the direction of James Emory Foxx, the nearest thing to a home run king since the one-and-only Babe Ruth retired from the Major League scene.

Foxx, who can play any position, now is second only to the big Bambino in the total number of four-baggers hit by a major leaguer. Yesterday Jimmy belted his 30th and 31st homers of the current campaign to boost his total for 13 years in the big show to 495 and break an old mark of 494 hit by Louis Gehrig in his 15 year career with the New York Yankees.

Of course, Foxx' total doesn't come near the number belted out of the lot by Babe Ruth. Babe collected 714 round-trippers, but then he gathered them over a span of 21 semesters. It is considered unlikely that old double X, who is now 32 years old, will be able to hold out long enough to catch Ruth.

There was a bit of dramatics in

PENNANT FEVER BEGINS TO GRIP RED BIRD FANS

Columbus Outfit Reduces
Kansas City Lead To 8½ Contests

COLUMBUS, August 17—Pennant fever began to infiltrate into Columbus today as the Red Birds swept the Milwaukee series by taking the finale, 7 to 2, for their fifth straight victory. The win lifted them to within 8½ games of the leading but cracking Kansas City Squad, who dropped their eighth straight game, 6-to-1, at Toledo.

An overflow crowd of 18,650 watched the Red Birds mark up their 21st win in their last 23 starts. Columbus bunched its 12 hits nicely, plating four runners in the third and three in the seventh.

The Blues ran into too much Johnny Marcum at Toledo. The veteran righthander granted the champs only five hits, and held them scoreless after the first canto.

Minneapolis clung to its slim one-game margin over the Red Birds for second place by shutting out Louisville, 4 to 0, as Mickey Haefner allowed only six hits and walked none.

But the best game of the day, although it meant little in the standings, saw St. Paul defeat Indianapolis, 1 to 0, with Saint hurler Tom Earley robbed of a no-hit game by Gil Brack's sixth-frame single. Johnny VanderMeer, the losing pitcher, allowed only four hits, but couldn't find the plate in the seventh and forced in the winning run.

SNEAD HAS CANADIAN OPEN PRACTICALLY IN THE BAG

TORONTO, August 17—Through carding thirteen pars and five birdies for a sensational 5-under-par 66, Sammy Snead of Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., today found himself with a formidable lead at the half-way stage of the Canadian Open Golf championship.

Snead's amazing tour of the Seabrook golf course climaxed an earlier almost as sensational round when the crack Pennsylvania player paced the field with a 4-under-par 67. This gave Snead a total of 133 for the 36-holes—five better than his closest opposition, Ray Mangrum of Oakmont, Pa.

Snead seemingly has the championship sewed up unless he should blow up in the final 36 holes today.

Chicago Falls Twice As

ST. LOUIS, August 17—The Cincinnati Reds, who snapped out of their lethargic streak by blasting out 26 hits to sweep a double bill at Chicago, 9 to 4 and 6 to 3, came to St. Louis today to tangle with the rampant Gas House Gang.

The win increased the Reds' lead to 6½ games, as Brooklyn lost a 12-inning thriller, 2 to 1, to Boston.

Whitney Moore had an easy time of it in the first game, shutting out the Cubs until the eighth, when Hank Leiber connected for his 14th homer of the season. Junior Thompson started the nightcap, but was relieved in the fourth by Johnny Hutchings, who got credit for his first win of the year.

The twin loss dumped the Cubs from the first division, their fourth-place slot being taken over by the Cards, who will send in Clyde Shoun against the Reds today. Bucky Walters, opposing him, will be attempting to rack up his 17th victory in the first of the three-game, two-day series.

LYNN LARY THROUGH

ST. LOUIS, August 17—The active playing days of Lynn Lary, veteran Major League infielder, apparently were at an end today. Lary, who began his major league baseball career when the New York Yankees purchased him from the Oakland Club of the Pacific Coast league in 1929 and subsequently played with the Boston Red Sox, Washington, the St. Louis Browns, Cleveland, Brooklyn, the St. Louis Cardinals and again with the Browns was given his unconditional release by the latter club yesterday.

HIGH SCHOOL COACHES CALL GRIDDERS TO REPORT TUESDAY AT 9 A. M.

12 YOUTHS WHO WON LETTERS TO BE IN UNIFORM

Drills To Start Wednesday;
Job Of Replacing Nine
Youngsters Faced

Circleville High School athletes who expect to compete for positions on the varsity football team this fall will gather at the school Tuesday at 9 a. m., to meet Coaches Roy Black and Tom Armstrong and receive equipment for practice sessions that will start in earnest the following day. The first game of the Tigers' nine-contest schedule will be on the home lot Friday, September 13, with Columbus' fighting Holy Rosary varsity providing the opposition.

Despite the loss of nine lettermen, several of whom filled key positions on the team, Coach Black, Saturday, declared that he expected to put a versatile and capable team on the field. "I believe that all of the boys around whom we expect to build the team this year will work for a single objective, that being to become parts of a winning combination," the mentor said.

He explained that most of the boys returning had gained experience last year and that with only one or two exceptions all the youths had gained in weight.

12 Lettermen Return

He will have 12 lettermen returning, enough to put a veteran team on the field and have another lad hanging around the edges. But what makes the coach confident that a winner will be produced is that many boys who gained some experience, but not enough to win letters will be in the fold and ready to replace any of the veterans who slip.

Gone from last year's varsity are Harold Smith, captain and sparkplug of the 1939 aggregation; Paul Walters, Bob Bowsher, Tom Harden, Jim Shea, Melvin Thompson, Howard Orr, Hulse Hays and Hansel Warner.

Returning lettermen will include the following who will be seniors, Clark Martin, Russ Liston, Marvin Jenkins, Carl Eby, Bob Brown and Bill Thornton, and the following who will be juniors, John Sabine, Norman Anderson, Joe Staley, Frank Gelb, Jim Moorehead and Paul Jackson.

Add to this list Jim Callahan, Harry Clifton, Richard Brintlinger, Bill Kochensparger, Dave Smallwood, Jack Hatzio, Dave Orr, Carl Bach, Bob Moon, Charles Zaenglein, Bob Goeller, Richard Binkley, Don Valentine, John Woods, Don Sowers, Virgil Wolfe, Jim Carr, Jack Crawford, Nolan Sims, George Trego and William Goeller, in addition to several others who may report, and you have the squad with whom Coaches Black and Armstrong will work.

Then, too, there will be a few boys up from the freshman class, who, with some training and experience, may break into action this year.

There is always a possibility that one or two, and sometimes more, boys turn up during a summer through change in address.

Seven on Home Field

Of the nine games on the schedule only two will be on the road, seven contests being scheduled under the lights of the school field. Holy Rosary, West Jefferson, Lancaster, Groveport, Hillsboro, Wilmington and Bremen will comprise the home schedule, with Greenfield and Washington C. H. will be met on foreign fields. Hillsboro, Wilmington, Greenfield and Washington C. H. will be South Central Ohio league jousts, while Bremen will be met Pumpkin Show week.

Of the nine teams against whom the Tigers will play, four will be under new coaches.

Some new equipment has been purchased for the squad, the Stooze Club putting out about $60 for new windbreakers, 20 being purchased. Six new head guards, six new blocking pads and six new shoulderpads have been purchased by the Athletic Association.

Coach Black urges that all boys report in the best condition possible because work will get under way Wednesday in earnest.

NEWPORT, R. I., August 17.—Don McNeil of Oklahoma City, holder of the American clay-court and inter-collegiate crowns, will clash with 20-year-old Frank Kovacs of Oakland, Cal., today in the first of the Newport tennis invitation challenge.

SOFTBALLERS WIN, 18-3

The Glitt softball team won an 18-3 victory Friday evening under the lights of the Carroll, Fairfield County, field. A Lancaster outfit provided little opposition.

Feller Wins Twenty-First

BOB Feller, stellar Cleveland Indian pitcher, is shown removing his uniform in the Cleveland dressing room after knocking off the Detroit Tigers to mark up his twentieth victory. Friday afternoon, Feller put the Indians three games ahead of the Tigers by defeating St. Louis while the Detroiters were losing again. The victory was No. 21.

Jimmie Foxx Smacks Two; Feller Adds To String

By Ed Kiely

NEW YORK, August 17.—It's high time today that we doff the derby in the direction of James Emory Foxx, the nearest thing to a home run king since the one-and-only Babe Ruth retired from the Major League scene.

Foxx, who can play any position, now is second only to the big Bambino in the total number of four-baggers hit by a major leaguer. Yesterday Jimmy belted his 30th and 31st homers of the current campaign to boost his total for 13 years in the big show to 495 and break an old mark of 494 hit by Louis Gehrig in his 15 year career with the New York Yankees.

Of course, Foxx' total doesn't come near the number belted out of the lot by Babe Ruth. Babe collected 714 round-trippers, but then he gathered them over a span of 21 semesters. It is considered unlikely that old double X, who is now 32 years old, will be able to hold out long enough to catch Ruth.

There was a bit of dramatics in

The win increased the Reds' lead to 6½ games, as Brooklyn lost a 12-inning thriller, 2 to 1, to Boston.

Whitey Moore had an easy time of it in the first game, shutting out the Cubs until the eighth, when Hank Leiber connected for his 14th homer of the season. Junior Thompson started the nightcap, but was relieved in the fourth by Johnny Hutchings, who got credit for his first win of the year.

The twin loss dumped the Cubs from the first division, their fourth-place slot being taken over by the Cards, who will send in Clyde Shoun against the Reds today. Bucky Walters, opposing him, will be attempting to rack up his 17th victory in the first of the three-game, two-day series.

LYNN LARY THROUGH

ST. LOUIS, August 17.—The active playing days of Lynn Lary, veteran Major League infielder, apparently were at an end today. Lary, who began his major league baseball career when the New York Yankees purchased him from the Oakland Club of the Pacific Coast league in 1929 and subsequently played with the Boston Red Sox, Washington, the St. Louis Browns, Cleveland, Brooklyn, St. Louis Cardinals and again with the Browns was given his unconditional release by the latter club yesterday.

RACERS MOVE TO MIDWEST AS GOSHEN MEET CLOSES

GOSHEN, N. Y., August 17.—Horses and racing equipment were being shipped to Springfield today pending the resumption of trotting races on the Illinois track following yesterday's Grand Circuit close at Good Time Park.

Lucy Hanover, owned and driven by Benny Franks of East DuBuque, Ill., took the spotlight yesterday by winning the 2-year-old consolation trotting stake. The win represented Franks' first victory of the season and he refused $10,000 for the filly after she had trotted the third heat in 2:09½ without urging.

Perpetual, driven by Dr. H. M. Parshall, won the first heat when Lucy Hanover made a break, but trailed in the last two.

Lord Selk, handled by Carl Dill, won the $500 classified trot.

LAMBEAU BELIEVES STARS WILL USE PASS ATTACK

GREEN BAY Wis., August 17.—Believing the college all-stars will make a bid for victory via an aerial attack in the gridiron battle at Soldier Field in Chicago on the night of August 29, Coach Curly Lambeau today concentrated on pass defense in the extensive drills of the Green Bay Packers.

With such skillful exponents of the forward pass as Nile Kinnick, the University of Iowa's all-American star, Kenny Washington and Banks McFadden at his command, the all-star coach, Dr. Edward Anderson, was expected by the Packer board of strategy to rely on that mode of attack.

FIGHT CALLED OFF

COLUMBUS, August 17.—Lack of patronage was the reason given today for the postponement of last night's scheduled 10-round fight between Eddie Simms, of Cleveland, and Eddie Winston, Hartford, Conn., Negro. Less than 200 fans were in the arena when the promoters took their action.

Another former Pickaway County school coach has accepted a position in a larger school, it was revealed Saturday, when the Kitts Hill board of education announced that Paul Hogan had been employed as coach there.

Hogan has been the Scioto Township, Commercial Point, mentor for the last two years, but resigned at the close of the last school year.

Hogan will succeed Merrill Payne, who transferred to Proctorville High.

Other county coaches who have stepped up this year are Al Kauer who has gone from Ashville to Radnor and Harry Townsend who has left Atlanta, Perry Township to go to Highland County.

THE HEROES AND THE GOATS

HEROES—Jimmy Foxx, Red Sox, whose homer of the day, broke Lou Gehrig's old mark and also beat the Senators; Bob Feller, Indian who won his 21st game of the year as Cleveland moved three games in front in the American League.

GOATS—Tommy Bridges, Tigers, who was knocked from the mound in the eighth under a nine-run barrage by the White Sox; Bill Lee, Cubs, who suffered his 14th defeat of the season.

TILDEN IN FORM

COLUMBUS, August 17.—Big Bill Tilden, now 48 years old, is still one of the finest racket-masters of them all, Columbus tennis fans agreed today. In an exhibition match, he really extended Fred Perry, famed English champ, before the latter marked up a three set, 6-4, 6-8, 6-2 victory.

Reservations For Space Gone; Plans For Big Camp Meeting Are Complete

Hundreds To Arrive For Services During Next Few Days

WEDNESDAY IS OPENER

Youth Rally Scheduled To Be Conducted Tuesday At Mt. Of Praise

Camp ground officials were busy Saturday making final arrangements for the opening of the Church of Christ Council - Camp meeting at the Mount of Praise camp grounds in Circleville, Wednesday.

Already officials report that about 30 persons have arrived for the event, and added that they expect hundreds more within the next few days. All reservations in the nine dormitories at the grounds were filled two weeks ago, it was reported, and many rooms in private homes have been reserved for persons planning to attend the event.

Tents and trailers will also house many of the camp visitors. Camp ground workers stated that they believed the attendance will surpass that of last year.

A number of new cottages have been erected on the grounds this year, and minor repairs have been made to camp ground equipment, but general facilities are about the same.

Although the camp meeting does not open officially until Wednesday, a Young People's State Rally will be held Tuesday evening, with the Rev. M. G. Standley, president of God's Bible School, Cincinnati, as speaker. Special music during the evening will be conducted by the God's Bible School quartet.

The camp meeting will open Wednesday at 2:30 p. m. with the Rev. Walter McKee delivering the opening address.

God's Care of His People

"He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; He leadeth me beside the still waters."

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Scripture—Psalm 23.

"Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil."

"Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; Thou anointest my head with oil."

"And I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever." (GOLDEN TEXT—Ps. 23:1)

God's Care of His People

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Aug. 18 is Psalm 23, the Golden Text being Psalm 23:1, "Jehovah is my shepherd; I shall not want.")

THE PSALM which is the subject of today's lesson is short, but it is probably the best known and loved of all the psalms. It has no date. Some put it early in David's life; some place it late. It might have been written about 1040 B. C. David lived through most of the 11th century.

Let us read it over and then talk about it.

"Jehovah is my shepherd; I shall not want,
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures;
He restoreth my soul:
He guideth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death,
I will fear no evil; for Thou art with me;
Thy rod and Thy staff, they comfort me."

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies;
Thou anointest my head with oil;
My cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and loving-kindness shall follow me all the days of my life;
And I shall dwell in the house of Jehovah forever."

"Jehovah is my shepherd." The Jews were a pastoral people, and shepherds guarded their flocks with their lives, if necessary. Therefore, there was no higher conception of tender care and watchfulness over those in his charge, than that of the shepherd and his flock. A shepherd saw that his charges had the best of pasture available, that they had water, that they had a place to rest; and if one was lost, the shepherd sought for it until it was found and restored to the flock.

Trust in the Lord
Thus does Jehovah watch over His people. If we but trust Him, we, too, shall be taken care of—led to green pastures beside still waters, our souls restored when they are weary.

We shall be led into paths of righteousness—not wickedness. And even if we are compelled to walk "through the valley of the shadow of death"—which we all must do some time in our lives—we should "fear no evil," for our God is with us; His rod and His staff shall comfort us—again symbols of the shepherd, for each shepherd carries a staff to lean upon and to touch the sheep with, and a rod with which he could strike down a wild beast that threatened his sheep.

"Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies." We all have enemies—evil thoughts that would lead us astray; temptations of many kinds that beset us and to which we may give way. But if we turn to Jehovah, our Shepherd, we will not turn from the paths of righteousness, but feast in the presence of these same enemies, and grow strong to withstand all such assaults.

Thou anointest my head with oil, my cup runneth over."
Anointing the head of a guest with sweet-smelling oil was an old Oriental custom. Do you remember when the woman anointed Jesus' head with precious ointment in the house of Simon? Jesus' host expostulated, and Jesus rebuked him, saying, "My head with oil thou didst not anoint." Simon had not treated the Lord as an honored guest, and had no right to reprove the woman who recognized her Savior.

Our cup of joy, therefore, is running over, because of our sureness of God's tender care.

And last, we must have faith that we shall be taken care of in the future—no matter what happens. "Surely goodness and loving-kindness shall follow me all the days of my life; and I shall dwell in the house of Jehovah forever."

How many of us can rely confidently on this promise in these troubled times? Surely the Lord has not failed us. We can still trust in Him and be serene even as "the old order changeth," and we fear for the future of thousands of the human race.

Surely we can have faith that we shall "dwell in the house of Jehovah forever."

God's Care of His People

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Aug. 18 is Psalm 23, the Golden Text being Psalm 23:1, "Jehovah is my shepherd; I shall not want.")

THE PSALM which is the subject of today's lesson is short, but it is probably the best known and loved of all the psalms. It has no date. Some put it early in David's life; some place it late. It might have been written about 1040 B. C. David lived through most of the 11th century.

Let us read it over and then talk about it.

"Jehovah is my shepherd; I shall not want."

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures;

He leadeth me beside still waters.

He restoreth my soul:

He guideth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death,

I will fear no evil; for Thou art with me;

Thy rod and Thy staff, they comfort me.

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies;

Thou anointest my head with oil;

My cup runneth over.

Surely goodness and loving-kindness shall follow me all the days of my life;

And I shall dwell in the house of Jehovah forever."

"Jehovah is my shepherd." The Jews were a pastoral people, and shepherds guarded their flocks with their lives, if necessary. Therefore, there was no higher conception of tender care and watchfulness over those in his charge, than that of the shepherd and his flock. A shepherd saw that his charges had the best of pasture available, that they had water, that they had a place to rest; and if one was lost, the shepherd sought for it until it was found and restored to the flock.

Trust in the Lord

Thus does Jehovah watch over His people. If we but trust Him, we too, shall be taken care of—led to green pastures beside still waters, our souls restored when they are weary.

We shall be led into paths of righteousness—not wickedness. And even if we are compelled to walk 'through the valley of the shadow of death'—which we all must do some time in our lives—we should "fear no evil," for our God is with us; His rod and His staff shall comfort us—again symbols of the shepherd, for each shepherd carries a staff to lean upon and to touch the sheep with, and a rod with which he could strike down a wild beast that threatened his sheep.

"Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies." We all have enemies—evil thoughts that would lead us astray; temptations of many kinds that beset us and to which we may give way. But if we turn to Jehovah, our Shepherd, we will not turn from the paths of righteousness, but feast in the presence of these same enemies, and grow strong to withstand all such assaults.

Thou anointest my head with oil, my cup runneth over."

Anointing the head of a guest with sweet-smelling oil was an old Oriental custom. Do you remember when the woman anointed Jesus' head with precious ointment in the house of Simon?

Jesus' host expostulated, and Jesus rebuked him, saying, "My head with oil thou didst not anoint." Simon had not treated the Lord as an honored guest, and had no right to reprove the woman who recognized her Savior. Our cup of joy, therefore, is running over, because of our sureness of God's tender care.

And last, we must have faith that we shall be taken care of in the future—no matter what happens. "Surely goodness and loving-kindness shall follow me all the days of my life; and I shall dwell in the house of Jehovah forever."

How many of us can rely confidently on this promise in these troubled times? Surely the Lord has not failed us. We can still trust in Him and be serene even as "the old order changeth," and we fear for the future of thousands of the human race.

Surely we can have faith that we shall "dwell in the house of Jehovah forever."

THIS MECHANIZED WARFARE

"YOU can't make soldiers in 90 days any longer," observes a newspaper man who fought in the last war. It will take a good year's training to get them ready to face what a soldier has to face today.

"To stand against modern weapons," explains an officer who is training a corps of business and professional men, "will take discipline beyond anything we have ever imagined, and to get this kind of discipline will require time.

"What would you do," he asks, "if you saw a steam roller coming at you? What would you do if you saw 40 of them coming at you? Wouldn't you run? You would if you lacked the highest discipline. Indeed, one good way to wake up the American people to the danger which exists would be to have them move out into a field and let the tanks come at them. Unless a man is highly disciplined, he will become a rabbit in the face of a mechanized enemy."

It's drill, drill, drill, he says, till soldiers' actions become automatic, and no matter how much they're scared, they face it and take it.

STYLE SHIFT

American styles for women are still tied to France, but dominance of French dressmakers beyond the coming winter is considered unlikely. And who will inherit the French dictatorship? Presumably America. When our modistes have coasted through the winter they are expected to make a real drive for American fashions in the spring.

"No doubt about it, this is the 1776 of the fashion world," says Miss Dora Loues Miller, a fashion observer and style adviser in Paris for 15 years. "There is a great possibility that the members of the smart international set who have arrived in this country, and particularly in New York, can and will sieve through the creations of the American designers and elect their own favorites. These designers will acquire prestige simultaneously with their customers, as happened abroad." Such leadership, as expressed through a cosmopolitan, traveled and social group of women, she expects, will bring to America a type of fashion inspiration that we have needed.

Our men, for the most part, may consider this development enormously unimportant, but the women know better.

Great Russia seems to think it's wonderful when she agrees to buy $40,000,000 worth of goods from us. Little Canada buys ten times that much and thinks nothing of it.

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . . . Hour by Hour

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up to a warmish morning, so did sit on the porch to scan the prints. Inside only long enough to quaff the mocha brew and then away for the village's business district. There little activity, for the hour was too early for the stores and professional men generally are the last to stir.

Met Charlie Weaver, who asked why I had not been down to fish his big pond this year and who remarked in passing that unless we get rain soon that he will join me in fishing those waters, for nothing will be left to occupy his attention on the land. Noted Norb Cochran moving about as rapidly as he makes things move down at the Container Corporation. Big improvements in that plant since Norb came here.

Came a letter from L. S. Gaiwin, the Lima publisher, who in commenting on the present mixed political situation and giving information that he would be unable to attend the Willkie celebration in Indiana wrote: Party fealty does seem to have disappeared when Republicans nominate Democrats and Democrats nominate Republicans of a few years ago. Nevertheless, the old ways of thinking politically are as much out as the old ways of economics, but in a democracy the majority wins and the majority has been for these changes."

Charlie Gilmore bent over the box of express and chatted with the office force about a big fish fry. Wasn't Russ Imler 'way up in Michigan and wasn't this dripping box from him? Must be big fish, else why such a large box? Must be valuable ones, else why shipment by express? Charlie had little more than hesitated over the $3.30 collect charge. Fine fish, those big ones from Michigan. Charlie had eaten them before.

Finally the big box was opened, and then came the insulation against heat. Charlie dug in and came up with the central package. Surprisingly small. Away came those wrappings, and revealed in all its lack of glory was a dime can of sardines. Charlie was hurt. Later he was angry. No, the express company could do nothing about it. The only thing Charlie figured he could do about the situation was keep quiet. That he did.

Two morning sessions of the Coffee Club passed and the big light and power man said nothing whatever about his shipment of fish from the north-land. As a matter of fact he has not mentioned the incident yet. He is restraining his temper as well as possible and awaiting the return of Russ Imler. In the meantime Coffee Club members look at Charlie's check for $3.30 and chuckle. They get a kick out of Charlie trying to keep the matter secret. The check will be returned by Frank Lynch, who is its present custodian. The deal was cooked up by the Coffee Club and Russ is entirely innocent. If he sent any fish home from his Michigan camp they would have to be sardines, but he would never send them with a $3.30 collect charge to his boss. Not to Charlie.

WILLKIE REVAMPS MACHINERY

WASHINGTON—For more than six weeks Wendell Willkie, behind a well-guarded privacy, has spent long hours conferring and working in his Colorado Springs retreat. Except for his skillfully handled daily press conference very little has leaked out regarding his activities.

In some GOP quarters Willkie's protracted western stay drew discreet but critical protests. He was wasting valuable time came the complaints, handling too much organizational detail himself.

It was true that the tousel-haired Republican standard bearer did occupy himself extensively with organization details. But he did not waste time—as plenty of old-line Republican politicians are privately, and very grumpily, attesting. He was far too busy to suit them or see much of them.

For the big untold story behind Willkie's long and mysterious labors in Colorado is that he completely revamped the traditional GOP campaign machinery. Under his firm-handed axing it has undergone the most far-reaching and significant shake-up in its history.

WILLKIE CLUBS

It's a closely guarded secret but under the new set-up, the Republican National Committee and its nation-wide network of state and local units, made up largely of veteran professionals, have been relegated to a secondary role.

Playing first fiddle in Willkie's new organization are the 800 Willkie clubs dotting every state, and the "independent Democrats" organization headed by ex-Roosevelt office holders Johnny Hanes, former undersecretary of the Treasury, and Lewis Douglas, former Budget Director. Directly controlled by Willkie and his personal lieutenants, these are the organizations on which he is depending to carry him into the White House.

This is a new departure in Republican campaign machinery, but Willkie believes it is based on sound theory.

He is convinced that to be elected he must win the big "floating" mass of independent votes. In his opinion, Roosevelt won in 1932 and 1936 because he got the bulk of this support. This year, Willkie deems conditions ripe for him to carry it.

That is why he lavished so much time and work in his guarded Colorado Springs sanctum putting together this new campaign gear. He is counting on it to turn the winning trick for him.

That, also, is why the regular GOP machinery has been quietly but firmly pushed into the background. Willkie is confident that the boys, even though they may mutter privately, will go along. There isn't anything else for them to do. They can't bolt to Roosevelt and they've been out of clover for a long time. They've got to take it and like it.

BACKGROUND OF PLAN

Willkie worked out the general plan of his set-up during the week-end following his nomination.

The nub of it was the selection of Representative Joe Martin as National Chairman to replace John Hamilton. Martin was on good terms both with the Willkie newcomers and the old-liners.

DIET AND HEALTH

No. 1 On the Mosquito's Preferred List

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

IN THESE early autumn days when the hum of anaphelis is heard in the still evening air, the plaint goes up—"These mosquitoes just love me better than anything on earth." Don't flatter yourself. As a choice of diet you rank quite low in the mosquito's preferred list. Horses head the list of the kind of blood the mosquito likes, then cows, then pigs, then dogs, then you, then chickens. These conclusions were arrived at by government entomologists who subjected the blood in a gorged mosquito to precipitation tests which make it possible to tell what animal it came from.

Do incubator babies attain full development or are they likely to be undersized? Infants born at seven to eight months have such a low vitality that if they are handled in the ordinary way they survive but a few weeks. The incubator takes the place of the mother's womb—poorly, of course, but for practical purposes in a good percentage of cases effectively. It provides an even temperature and other protection. The two other problems of the premature infant are to keep it breathing and to provide nourishment. The breathing center is not well developed in prematurity because such infants were not prepared yet for an atmospheric existence. Sucking and swallowing reflexes are also at low ebb, and digestion poor, so feeding is always difficult to manage.

If these are overcome, however, the premature infant develops quite naturally. There is a lag in development in the first few months, and nutritional diseases, such as anemia, rickets and tetany are frequent. "By the end of the first year," write Holt and Howland, "many have compensated for their early handicaps and are as large and vigorous as other infants. There seems to be no lasting result produced by prematurity."

The influences that make for undersize or produce midgets are due to constitutional hereditary causes not necessarily connected with prematurity.

What are the commonest causes of painful, weak feet? Bad shoes! The barefoot savage never has broken arches, while among shoe wearing civilians thirty out of every hundred rejections for army service are due to flat feet.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

A. D.—"Will you please explain something? If a person has tuberculosis and it is said to be 'inactive,' what does it mean? What is the meaning of active and inactive tuberculosis. Can a person with inactive tuberculosis be cured? And could you tell me if it is possible for other people to get the disease from that person?"

Answer—Inactive tuberculosis is defined as tuberculosis in which the disease is not progressing and no germs can be found in the sputum or from stomach washings. It is really the stage of active tuberculosis in which cure has begun. If we accept the definition literally, that there are no germs being cast out, other people can not get the disease from a person with inactive tuberculosis.

Love without Music

Helen Welshimer
WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER FORTY-FOUR

LINDA had to wait a long time before her call to Robert's club was answered. Finally a sleepy servant murmured the name of the association and waited.

"May I speak to Mr. Barton, Mr. Robert Barton?" she asked. "He may be there. He's taking a late train upstate tonight."

The sleepy voice became awake. "Yes, Miss Helen. You're Miss Trent, aren't you? He said he was expecting a call and it was important. Wait, I'll get him."

The man did not give her a chance to say that she was not Billie Anne, and in another moment she heard Robert's eager tones, calling her by another girl's name. She did not answer. She knew that her voice would break if she should try.

Instead she hung up and buried her face in the pillows. Sob after sob shook her slender body. Maybe this was a good thing, she tried to reason. She would cry it all out now—all the disappointment and heart-break—and go dry-eyed forever.

The next day was hot. The thin white linen dress she wore seemed to cling to her and her amber curls, instead of staying in the even rows in which she had trained them, spun all over her head. Her eyes were a clear, cool green. She was methodical and orderly and worked rapidly.

About noon Mr. Bagley came out of his office bringing a noted photographer with him. They eyed Linda critically. Her employer explained: "This is Mr. Harrison, as you know, Linda. He has to supply a whole series of pictures for a fashion magazine—the girl in everything from a bathing suit and negligee to an evening gown. It's to be a honeymoon outfit. And he likes your looks. Want to try it?"

Anything was better than sitting at a desk, answering a white ivory telephone which rang with every kind of business engagement and nothing else, ever.

"Hortense will take over for you," Mr. Bagley said.

Linda got her turban, which was made from the same crushed linen as the dress, and went with the photographer. It was odd that he had come down to talk over models. Usually artists and illustrators and advertisers alike had the agency send out one whom the director thought acceptable, or at the best, a few from whom to choose.

She spent the afternoon in the studio, posing in one outfit after another. She told herself that the whole set-up was slightly ironical. Here she was, going to move to a woman's club, and she was asked to be a magazine bride.

She did not go to the office the next day, either, for the pictures were not completed until dusk. When she sat down at her desk the third day Hortense said:

"There's a telephone message for you somewhere. Long distance. The operator tried to call you twice. Now where did I put it?"

She searched the desk, but the scrap of paper did not appear.

"When did the call come in?" Linda asked. Was it yesterday? Was it the afternoon before? And from whom had it come? She told herself that it was an unimportant message, but she dared to hope, as women have always hoped, that Robert had tried to reach her.

And yet, why should he? He had said goodbye, definitely, and had gone away. He had no way of knowing that she had tried to reach him.

She spent the afternoon in the studio, posing in one outfit after another.

The message could not be found, so Hortense gave up at last and went back to her desk. A few minutes later some of the pictures of Linda came in. She looked at herself, serene and cool, in the borrowed finery. No one ever would know that that girl had wanted something she could not have.

Maybe life was like that, asking you to take a pose and keep it, to wear a mask all of your days, so other people would think that you were happy and contented.

Whatever the message was, if it were important it would be found, or the party would call again, she reminded herself.

That night she moved out of the apartment, into the hotel for women. She left no forwarding address. Instead, she notified the postoffice where to send her mail.

When you closed a door it was best to lock it. Forever. And throw away the key.

But during the days that followed, now and then she wondered why Billie Anne had called Robert twice that evening. There had been a call for Robert from her at police headquarters and another when he had been at the club later that night.

Quietly one evening Ronald and Sarah slipped away to be married and take a boat southward. Linda read about it in the newspapers.

Hortense expressed startled indignation. "He's yours. You can't let that glamor whoist march him off. Why don't you do something?"

"He isn't mine," Linda answered. "That's all washed up. He and Sarah are right for each other."

"And what about you? Going to stay here and model clothes when you get a chance and answer the telephone and make out the bills the rest of the time? Thought about that, didn't you?"

"Oh, I'll get along." (I'll get

This is what the stars say concerning the fortunes of those who are celebrating birthdays today: They will gain unexpectedly through hard work and military affairs. However, there is, nevertheless, need for watchfulness against attempted deception. The child born on this date will have a somewhat strange and complex nature, rather erratic and subject to moods. He or she will have musical or artistic ability. The portents for marriage are adverse, so this phase of the life of this personality is exceptionally important.

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . . . Hour by Hour

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up to a warmish morning, so did sit on the porch to scan the prints. Inside only long enough to quaff the mocha brew and then away for the village's business district. There little activity, for the hour was too early for the stores and professional men generally are the last to stir.

Met Charlie Weaver, who asked why I had not been down to fish his big pond this year and who remarked in passing that unless we get rain soon that he will join me in fishing those waters, for nothing will be left to occupy his attention on the land. Noted Norb Cochran moving about as rapidly as he makes things move down at the Container Corporation. Big improvements in that plant since Norb came here.

Came a letter from L. S. Galvin, the Lima publisher, who in commenting on the present mixed political situation and giving information that he would be unable to attend the Willkie celebration in Indiana wrote: Party fealty does seem to have disappeared when Republicans nominate Democrats and Democrats nominate Republicans of a few years ago. Nevertheless, the old ways of thinking politically are as much out as the old ways of economics, but in a democracy the majority wins and the majority has been for these changes."

Charlie Gilmore bent over the box of express and chatted with the office force about a big fish fry. Wasn't Russ Imler 'way up in Michigan and wasn't this dripping box from him? Must be big fish, else why such a large box? Must be valuable ones, else why shipment by express? Charlie had little more than hesitated over the $3.30 collect charge. Fine fish, those big ones from Michigan. Charlie had eaten them before.

Finally the big box was opened, and then came the insulation against heat. Charlie dug in and came up with the central package. Surprisingly small. Away came those wrappings, and revealed in all its lack of glory was a dime can of sardines. Charlie was hurt. Later he was angry. No, the express company could do nothing about it. The only thing Charlie figured he could do about the situation was keep quiet. That he did.

Two morning sessions of the Coffee Club passed and the big light and power man said nothing whatever about his shipment of fish from the north-land. As a matter of fact he has not mentioned the incident yet. He is restraining his temper as well as possible and awaiting the return of Russ Imler. In the meantime Coffee Club members look at Charlie's check for $3.30 and chuckle. They get a kick out of Charlie trying to keep the matter secret. The check will be returned by Frank Lynch, who is its present custodian. The deal was cooked up by the Coffee Club and Russ is entirely innocent. If he sent any fish home from his Michigan camp they would have to be sardines, but he would never send them with a $3.30 collect charge to his boss. Not to Charlie.

WILLKIE REVAMPS MACHINERY

WASHINGTON—For more than six weeks Wendell Willkie, behind a well-guarded privacy, has spent long hours conferring and working in his Colorado Springs retreat. Except for his skillfully handled daily press conference very little has leaked out regarding his activities.

In some GOP quarters Willkie's protracted western stay drew discreet but critical protests. He was wasting valuable time came the complaints, handling too much organizational detail himself.

It was true that the tousel-haired Republican standard bearer did occupy himself extensively with organization details. But he did not waste time—as plenty of old-line Republican politicians are privately, and very grumpily, attesting. He was far too busy to suit them or see much of them.

For the big untold story behind Willkie's long and mysterious labors in Colorado is that he completely revamped the traditional GOP campaign machinery. Under his firm-handed axing it has undergone the most far-reaching and significant shake-up in its history.

WILLKIE CLUBS

It's a closely guarded secret but under the new set-up, the Republican National Committee and its nation-wide network of state and local units, made up largely of veteran professionals, have been relegated to a secondary role.

Playing first fiddle in Willkie's new organization are the 800 Willkie clubs dotting every state, and the "independent Democrats" organization headed by ex-Roosevelt office holders Johnny Hanes, former undersecretary of the Treasury, and Lewis Douglas, former Budget Director. Directly controlled by Willkie and his personal lieutenants, these are the organizations on which he is depending to carry him into the White House.

This is a new departure in Republican campaign machinery, but Willkie believes it is based on sound theory. He is convinced that to be elected he must win the big "floating" mass of independent votes. In his opinion, Roosevelt won in 1932 and 1936 because he got the bulk of this support. This year, Willkie deems conditions ripe for him to carry it. That is why he lavished so much time and work in his guarded Colorado Springs sanctum putting together this new campaign gear. He is counting on it to turn the winning trick for him.

That, also, is why the regular GOP machinery has been quietly but firmly pushed into the background. Willkie is confident that the boys, even though they may mutter privately, will go along. There isn't anything else for them to do. They can't bolt to Roosevelt and they've been out of clover for a long time. They've got to take it and like it.

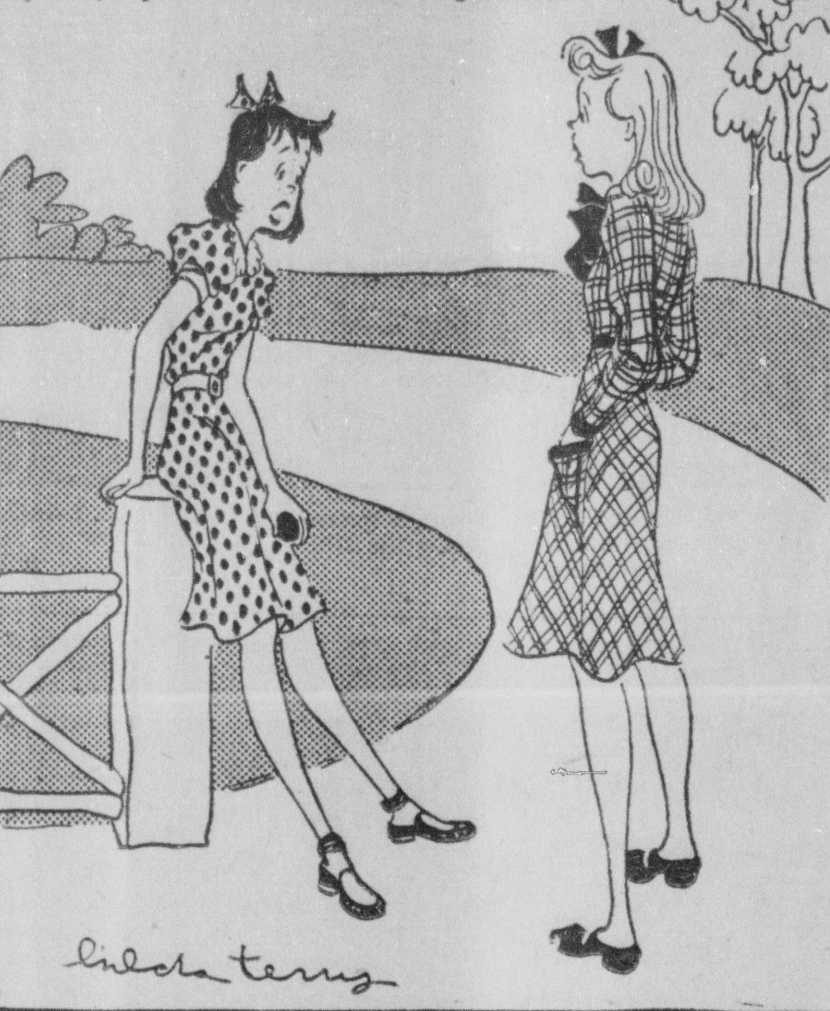

BACKGROUND OF PLAN

Willkie worked out the general plan of his set-up during the week-end following his nomination.

The nub of it was the selection of Representative Joe Martin as National Chairman to replace John Hamilton. Martin was on good terms both with the Willkie newcomers and the old-liners. (Continued on Page Six)

DIET AND HEALTH

No. 1 On the Mosquito's Preferred List

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

IN THESE early autumn days when the hum of anopheles is heard in the still evening air, the plaint goes up—"These mosquitoes just love me better than anything on earth." Don't flatter yourself. As a choice of diet you rank quite low in the mosquito's preferred list. Mosquitoes head the list of the kind of blood the mos-

Do incubator babies attain full development or are they likely to be undersized?

Infants born at seven to eight months have such a low vitality that if they are handled in the ordinary way they survive but a few weeks. The incubator takes the place of the mother's womb—poorly, of course, but for practical purposes in a good percentage of cases effectively. It provides an even temperature and other protection. The two other problems of the premature infant are to keep it breathing and to provide nourishment. The breathing center is not well developed in prematurity because such infants were not prepared yet for an atmospheric existence. Sucking and swallowing reflexes are also at low ebb, and digestion poor, so feeding is always difficult to manage.

If these are overcome, however, the premature infant develops quite naturally. There is a lag in development in the first few months, and nutritional diseases, such as anemia, rickets and tetany are frequent. "By the end of the first year," write Holt and Howland, "many have compensated for their early handicaps and are as large and vigorous as other infants. There seems to be no lasting result produced by prematurity."

The influences that make for undersize or produce midgets are due to constitutional hereditary causes not necessarily connected with prematurity.

What are the commonest causes of painful, weak feet?

Bad shoes! The barefoot savage never has broken arches, while among shoe wearing civilians thirty out of every hundred rejections for army service are due to flat feet.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

A. D.—"Will you please explain something? If a person has tuberculosis and it is said to be 'inactive,' what does it mean? What is the meaning of active and inactive tuberculosis. Can a person with inactive tuberculosis be cured? And could you tell me if it is possible for other people to get the disease from that person?"

Answer—Inactive tuberculosis is defined as tuberculosis in which the disease is not progressing and no germs can be found in the sputum or from stomach washings. It is really the stage of active tuberculosis in which cure has begun. If we accept the definition literally, that there are no germs being cast out, other people cannot get the disease from a person with inactive tuberculosis.

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER FORTY-FOUR

LINDA had to wait a long time before her call to Robert's club was answered. Finally a sleepy servant murmured the name of the association and waited.

"May I speak to Mr. Barton, Mr. Robert Barton?" she asked. "He may be there. He's taking a late train upstate tonight."

The sleepy voice became awake. "Yes, Miss, he's here. You're Miss Trent, aren't you? He said he was expecting a call and it was important. Wait, I'll get him."

The man did not give her a chance to say that she was not Billie Anne, and in another moment she heard Robert's eager tones, calling her by another girl's name. She did not answer. She knew that her voice would break if she should try.

Instead she hung up and buried her face in the pillows. Sob after sob shook her slender body. Maybe this was a good thing, she tried to reason. She would cry it all out now—all the disappointment and heart-break—and go dry-eyed forever.

The next day was hot. The thin white linen dress she wore seemed to cling to her and her amber curls, instead of staying in the even rows in which she had trained them, spun all over her head. Her eyes were a clear, cool green. She was methodical and orderly and worked rapidly.

About noon Mr. Bagley came out of his office bringing a noted photographer with him. They eyed Linda critically. Her employer explained: "This is Mr. Harrison, as you know, Linda. He has to supply a whole series of pictures for a fashion magazine—the girl in everything from a bathing suit and negligee to an evening gown. It's to be a honeymoon outfit. And he likes your looks. Want to try it?"

Anything was better than sitting at a desk, answering a white ivory telephone which rang with every kind of business engagement and nothing else, ever.

"Hortense will take over for you," Mr. Bagley said.

Linda got her turban, which was made from the same crushed linen as the dress, and went with the photographer. It was odd that he had come down to talk over models. Usually artists and illustrators and advertisers alike had the agency send out one whom the director thought acceptable, or at the best, a few from whom to choose.

She spent the afternoon in the studio, posing in one outfit after another. She told herself that the whole set-up was slightly ironical. Here she was, going to move to a woman's club, and she was asked to be a magazine bride.

She did not go to the office the next day, either, for the pictures were not completed until dusk. When she sat down at her desk the third day Hortense said:

"There's a telephone message for you somewhere. Long distance. The operator tried to call you twice. Now where did I put it?"

She searched the desk, but the scrap of paper did not appear. "When did the call come in?" Linda asked. Was it yesterday? Was it the afternoon before? And from whom had it come? She told herself that it was an unimportant message, but she dared to hope, as women have always hoped, that Robert had tried to reach her.

And yet why should he? He had said goodbye, definitely, and had gone away. He had no way of knowing that she had tried to reach him.

In view of the conflicting reports from belligerent propaganda bureaus, the man at the next desk thinks that what this war really needs is an official scorer.

The war of nerves was invented by the first baby which made a practice of waking up the exact moment Papa and Mamma fell asleep.

The earliest glove makers in history were the monks under Charlemagne who were granted unrestricted rights of hunting in return for making gloves, girdles and book covers from skins of deer they killed.

Some of the roulette wheels at Amed Monte Carlo lose for the house year after year. The tables are not removed because they serve to draw patrons.

She spent the afternoon in the studio, posing in one outfit after another.

The message could not be found, so Hortense gave up at last and went back to her desk. A few minutes later some of the pictures of Linda came in. She looked at herself, serene and cool, in the borrowed finery. No one ever would know that that girl had wanted something she could not have.

Maybe life was like that, asking you to take a pose and keep it, to wear a mask all of your days, so other people would think that you were happy and contented.

Whatever the message was, if it were important it would be found, or the party would call again, she reminded herself.

That night she moved out of the apartment, into the hotel for women. She left no forwarding address. Instead, she notified the postoffice where to send her mail.

When you closed a door it was best to lock it. Forever. And throw away the key.

But during the days that followed, now and then she wondered why Billie Anne had called Robert twice that evening. There had been a call for Robert from her at police headquarters and another when he had been at the club later that night.

Quietly one evening Ronald and Sarah slipped away to be married and take a boat southward. Linda read about it in the newspapers.

Hortense expressed startled indignation. "He's yours. You can't let that glamor whoist march him off. Why don't you do something?"

"He isn't mine," Linda answered. "That's all washed up. He and Sarah are right for each other."

"And what about you? Going to stay here and model clothes when you get a chance and answer the telephone and make out the bills the rest of the time? Thought about that?"

"Oh, I'll get along." (I'll get along without Robert. I'll get up every morning at eight o'clock, join the subway procession at half-past eight, and sit down at a desk at nine. And all of the time I'll be wondering why things didn't work on a better schedule. But I'll get along!)

Later in the day word came that some of the group of fashion pictures were to be used in a photograph display in a daily paper and Linda received another modeling assignment.

She was weary when she left the office that night. She bought a paper, noticed that a jury was being chosen and a date selected for the Nevins trial, and read that Mina was pleading insanity. It was true, too. The actress' sanity had been doubted for a long time by Robert. She realized she and Robert would be subpoenaed as witnesses. Well, anyway, she would get to see him. She would have one long last look at the browned face, the far-seen eyes, the mouth that curved into laughter. She would put it away, then, and not look at the picture until it was too old to hurt.

For a girl named Billie Anne Trent was the winner now.

If she hadn't gone into the drug store at the club for a late milk shake, she would not have glanced over someone's shoulder at a headline in a paper. And if she had not seen it, she would have gone upstairs to sleep in her chintz and maple room, instead of staring wide-eyed at the headlines.

But one thought ran through her mind. Were newspapers always, always going to upset her life? Would they forever bring the news?

Then she was hurrying toward the elevators with only one thought in her mind. She must pack a bag and leave. Quickly.

2. In what country are the most fur coats worn?
3. What is a recidivist?

Today's Horoscope

This is what the stars say concerning the fortunes of those who are celebrating birthdays today: They will gain unexpectedly through hard work and military affairs. However, there is, nevertheless, need for watchfulness against attempted deception. The child born on this date will have a somewhat strange and complex nature, rather erratic and subject to moods. He or she will have musical or artistic ability. The portents for marriage are adverse, so this phase of the life of this personality is exceptionally important.

Hints on Etiquette

When presents are given at a birthday party, it is customary to open them as soon as they are presented, not to leave them unopened until the party is over.

Words of Wisdom

Cultivation to the mind, is as necessary as food to the body.—Cicero.

Horoscope for Sunday

Is your birthday today? You are warned that some difficulties in your love or domestic affairs threaten you. However, business, travel and correspondence are favorably indicated. The child born on this day will be of a somewhat complex nature—good-natured but rather erratic. If born late in the day, however, a sweet disposition and good fortune are indicated.

Washington Merry-Go Round

Also, the House leader had national campaign experience as Landon's eastern manager, and is sympathetic to innovations.

But Martin, burdened with heavy congressional duties, didn't want the job. That was why, when the National Committee group met with Willkie in New York, no conclusion was reached on the chairmanship. An effort was made to persuade him to continue Hamilton, but Willkie stood pat. In this discussion he based his opposition to Hamilton on three grounds:

1. That he (Willkie) had won the nomination at the convention over the opposition of the politicians and that if he turned around and entrusted the campaign leadership to them his independent supporters would desert him.

2. To win the election he has to get the independent vote and it cannot be won by the old-line politicians.

3. That he was advised that the politicians had moved in on Landon in 1936 and had made a botch of his campaign.

For these reasons, Willkie argue, it was necessary to conduct an entirely different kind of campaign with a new type of leadership, and as the chosen standard bearer he intended to see that this was done. He expressed confidence that under Martin's command the old and the new, that is the Willkie clubs and the regular organization, could be harmonized to work together.

Faced with this adamant stand, the National Committee chiefs dropped Hamilton. And Joe Martin, chiefly through the urging of his close friend Landon, finally agreed to become chairman.

Pickaway Pays 29 Cents Per Capita For Library

Pickaway County, which has received considerable national publicity recently because of the excellence of its county-wide library program, pays far less than most counties for this service.

Paul A. T. Noon, state librarian, reports that according to statistics compiled by the Ohio State Library, Pickaway County pays only 29 cents per capita while Stark, Ashland, Hancock, Wood and Sandusky Counties which have approximately the same per capita total wealth as Pickaway County spent respectively, 55 cents, 53 cents, 34 cents, 55 cents, and 50 cents. Of these counties only Stark begins to compare with Pickaway in the caliber of the county-wide library service being given.

The work being done by the Circleville Public Library is in line with the program initiated five years ago by most of the counties of the state. During these five years Ohio libraries concentrated their efforts not only on improved service but on bringing books to several millions of new rural borrowers, totally unreached before 1935.

In Pickaway County, since 1935, great strides have been made in this direction. At first service was increased only by serving without charge county residents visiting the main library but two years ago county-wide bookmobile service was begun with the result that in 1938 74,339 books were circulated from the bookmobile alone, this increasing in 1939 to 87,029.

So successful was the bookmobile that Daniel R. Pfoutz, local librarian, was asked to write about this service for the May 15 issue of "The Library Journal," one of the official publications of the library profession.

ANOTHER ARREST MADE IN DRIVE ON BAD CHECKS

Determined to break up a wave of bad check passing in Circleville and Pickaway County, Sheriff Charles Radcliff and Police Chief William McCrady arrested eighteen-year-old Joseph Leach, Logan Street, late Friday and charged him with forgery.

Following his arrest, Leach confessed having cashed a $12 check, to which he forged the name of a local farmer for whom he had worked during the harvest season. A Circleville gasoline concern accepted the check.

Sheriff Radcliff said that the youth told him he had gone to the gas station, told the attendant that his car had run out of gasoline, and had purchased one gallon of gas with the $12 forged check. Leach was committed to County Jail Friday, the date of his hearing having not yet been set. He is now on parole from Boy's Industrial School at Lancaster for auto theft.

Sheriff Radcliff and Chief McCrady stated that they were sure the youth had no connection with James Chandler, and his housekeeper, Pearl Blanton, of New Holland, whom they arrested Wednesday on forgery charges. Both Chandler and Miss Blanton were bound over to the grand jury on $1,000 bonds.

Naturally such observations have not improved relations between Stone and the regulars and a first class row is in progress between them. How this and other rows in

CARS HIT AT LIGHT
Patrolman Fred Fitzpatrick reported slight damage to the automobile of George Biesinger, Columbus, when it was struck from behind by the farm truck of Isaac Wolford Route 2, Ashville, as the two vehicles were going north on Court Street late Friday. Patrolman Fitzpatrick said the Biesinger car had stopped for the light at Watt and Pinckney Street and that the Wolford truck, following behind, failed to make the stop.

Faced with this adamant stand, the National Committee chiefs dropped Hamilton. And Joe Martin, chiefly through the urging of his close friend Landon, finally agreed to become chairman.

UNDERCOVER GRINDING

Although there was nothing the politicians could do to prevent Willkie from setting up his new machinery, there are undercover indications that he and Martin have their work cut out for them making it click. A lot of the boys don't like the idea of being side-tracked for that "bunch of amateurs", as they call the Willkie men.

For eight years the professionals, in the precincts, counties and districts, have been grimly hanging on and plugging away hoping for a turn in the tide. Now, with prospects bright for that turn, it sources them to the core to play second fiddle to a crew of new-comers, many of them Democrats.

Martin could solve a lot of his troubles if he would pass the word down the line assuring the regulars that they will handle patronage. But that would be sure to leak out and would raise hob with the Willkie clubs. So he is standing pat and making no promises—to the great anguish of the professionals.

KENTUCKY FEUD

Illustrative of these local clashes is the stormy row behind the scenes in Kentucky.

Long-time boss of the regular state organization is tall, gangling Representative John M. Robison. In this role he is in control of that party's election machinery. But James C. Stone, wealthy Lexington tobacco dealer and original Willkie booster, has the nominee's ear.

As chairman of the finance committee of the Willkie clubs, Stone plans to raise $150,000 in Kentucky, of which $125,000 will be spent in the state and $25,000 sent to the national headquarters. This is satisfactory to Robison, but where the rub comes in is that Stone intends to handle the spending of the money himself.

Robison and his lieutenants don't like that one bit and have told Stone so in blunt language. They insist that the campaign funds be turned over to the regular organization as in the past.

Stone's reply is that his organization intends to pay only for performance and not promises of performance. He pointed out that it is no secret that there have been campaigns when money collected for electioneering got no further than the pockets of the politicians.

Naturally such observations have not improved relations between Stone and the regulars and a first class row is in progress between them. How this and other rows in

Pickaway Pays 29 Cents Per Capita For Library

Pickaway County, which has received considerable national publicity recently because of the excellence of its county-wide library program, pays far less than most counties for this service.

Paul A. T. Noon, state librarian, reports that according to statistics compiled by the Ohio State Library, Pickaway County pays only 29 cents per capita while Stark, Ashland, Hancock, Wood and Sandusky Counties which have approximately the same per capita total other states will be settled remains to be seen.

NOTE—Willkie's shelving of the Old Guards seems to have slipped a cog in the selection by the Chicago headquarters of Harry Colmery, former Legion National Commander, as head of the "Willkie War Veterans Committee." He represents chain store interests before the Kansas legislature and also has a number of utility clients in his law practice. Democratic sharpshooters already are training their guns on him.

In Pickaway County, since 1935, great strides have been made in this direction. At first service was increased only by serving without charge county residents visiting the main library but two years ago county-wide bookmobile service was begun with the result that in 1938 74,339 books were circulated from the bookmobile alone, this increasing in 1939 to 87,029.

So successful was the bookmobile that Daniel R. Pfoutz, local librarian, was asked to write about this service for the May 15 issue of "The Library Journal," one of the official publications of the library profession.

Determined to break up a wave of bad check passing in Circleville and Pickaway County, Sheriff Charles Radcliff and Police Chief William McCrady arrested eighteen-year-old Joseph Leach, Logan Street, late Friday and charged him with forgery.

Following his arrest, Leach confessed having cashed a $12 check, to which he forged the name of a local farmer for whom he had worked during the harvest season. A Circleville gasoline concern accepted the check.

Sheriff Radcliff said that the youth told him he had gone to the gas station, told the attendant that his car had run out of gasoline, and had purchased one gallon of gas with the $12 forged check. Later he poured the gasoline away. Leach was committed to County Jail Friday, the date of his hearing having not yet been set. He is now on parole from Boy's Industrial School at Lancaster for auto theft.

Sheriff Radcliff and Chief McCrady stated that they were sure the youth had no connection with James Chandler, and his housekeeper, Pearl Blanton, of New Holland, whom they arrested Wednesday on forgery charges. Both Chandler and Miss Blanton were bound over to the grand jury on $1,000 bonds.

STARS SAY—

For Saturday, August 17 THE CUSTOMARY holiday spirit might as well be indulged this day, since what business there is would only be a routine nature and not particularly prolific or advantageous at that. There are signs of social, romantic and intellectual activity far more lucrative, enjoyable and worthwhile. It would be a propitious time for trying your hand at writing love dramas or romantic adventure stories. The urge is backed by novel ideas and plots.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year in which they may have excellent opportunity for putting into execution those long simmering ideas threatening to "set the world on fire." New plans and fresh ways of doing things should be successfully developed, with the prospect of large business interests being easily shown, whereas employers or superiors might demand revisions. Close at home there will be sympathy and support in furthering novel themes, especially should they manifest as a desire for society fiction, romantic drama, or prosaic scientific research. It is an excellent period for giving expression to creative urges.

A child born on this day may be extremely versatile and variable, with decided bends toward creative, art, literature or drama. However, this urge may not prove educative or happy unless released from some inherent natal tendencies by strict proper direction and restraints.

For Sunday, August 18

SUNDAY'S horoscope is not a very auspicious one, as it holds testimonies of inharmonies, disruption and other forms of disastrous and devastating nature. This affecting home, social and romantic affairs as well as any business that might be in conformity with Sabbath relaxations. Try to find solace and uplift in spiritual readings and contemplation.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of sudden developments for an unsettling and disruptive if not disastrous nature, turmoil and tempest, strife and wrecklessness would precipitate the latter, while composure, tact, compromise in difficulties might avert troublesome denouements.

A child born on this day may have a wayward, impetuous and erratic nature, unless it be assisted to rely on certain deep spiritual or intellectual undercurrents. Such might be brought to the surface in art, music, poetry.

Carl Tigner, 377 Weldon Avenue, raced down Pickaway Street hill Friday afternoon to beat Paul Eitel, Route 3, Circleville, in the annual Nail Keg Derby speed event. The Tigner lad followed his competitor all the way down the hill and then passed him within inches of the finish line.

Winner of the distance run, and of the prize of $5, also in merchandise, was Paul Eitel, while Marion Sowers placed second and Olen Conner, 677 South Court Street, third.

ets were awarded to the first, second and third place winners respectively.

Winner of the distance run, and of the prize of $5, also in merchandise, was Paul Eitel, while Marion Sowers placed second and Olen Conner, 677 South Court Street, third.

Derby officials felt that the starting ramp, constructed by the WPA Recreation Department greatly increased the fairness of the event and gave all drivers an even start.

OBJECTIVES ON ISLES WRECKED

fighting (bombing) squadrons to reach their objectives.

"Last night British planes penetrating Reich territory attacked several places with moderate effect. Some apartment houses were hit by bombs and two civilians were killed and several injured.

"Yesterday's enemy losses totaled 89, of which 59 were destroyed in air battles, 23 on the ground and seven by anti-aircraft fire during the night.

"Twenty-two barrage balloons were set on fire. Thirty one German planes are missing.

German submarines sank several strongly convoyed armed merchant vessels totalling 25,700 tons including a tanker of 5,700 tons."

German sources said the Nazi planes which raided the London region yesterday left numerous fires in their wake, causing severe damage to defense works around the British capital.

An official announcement late this morning said that 89 British planes were destroyed during yesterday's fierce combats over the London region and other sections of Britain. Twenty-seven German planes were lost, the statement said.

In addition, it was claimed, the Germans destroyed 22 barrage balloons and one British destroyer.

An earlier announcement said that German fighting planes have been ordered to refrain from engaging in air battles and to concentrate on protecting German bombers from enemy attacks.

Berlin authorities added that no figures have been given out on the number of planes which participated in yesterday's attacks.

Illustrating the extent of the raids, Berlin sources quoted one returning Nazi pilot as stating that his flight group of 18 Junkers dive-bombers alone dumped 50 tons of explosives on airplane factories west of London.

In addition, it was announced, the British airport at Lee-on-Solent was bombed and its hangars set on fire. Several planes on the ground were said to have been destroyed.

Five hangars were set on fire at the Gosport airport, the German statement said, and three planes were destroyed on the ground.

Another announcement said anti-aircraft batteries repulsed a British air attack on an air-drome in northwestern France and that no bombs were dropped.

Two British planes were shot down by groundfire at Bretagne, it was claimed, and three members of the crews were saved.

LONDON DISTRICT RAIDS CONTINUE ON LARGE SCALE

England. Otherwise very little damage was caused.

"An enemy bomber was shot down by anti-aircraft guns into the channel during the early hours of the morning."

75 Raiders Destroyed

The air ministry announced that at least 75 German raiders were knocked down, while only 22 British combat planes were admitted lost in the tremendous sky clashes yesterday, involving an estimated 2,000 planes or more.

During the night one enemy plane dropped nine bombs on a residential district in a south-western English coastal town, damaging a number of houses but causing no casualties, authorities said.

Earlier a number of bombs were dropped on various points in Wales.

A number of houses were partially demolished during the night raids on Wales and several casualties were caused. One person was reported killed.

Some of the bombs fell on a Welsh coastal town. There was no anti-aircraft fire.

Two bombs fell on the main square of another Welsh town, damaging houses and smashing the windows of three hotels, while another bomb dropped near a bridge, causing several casualties. Fire broke out but was quickly extinguished. A woman near the scene commented:

"It was remarkable that no one was killed. One woman fell from her bedroom into the room below, but she was not seriously hurt."

Residential Town Raided

The latest communiqué of the Air and Home Security Ministries charged that the Germans had made a "deliberate" raid on Eastbourne, a southeast coast residential town.

"On several occasions yesterday evening waves of aircraft crossed the coasts but most of them scattered over a wide area. They dropped bombs at many points in the country districts of Hertfordshire, Essex, Surrey, Hampshire and Oxfordshire, but little damage was done.

"Some people were injured. Reports so far received indicate the number killed was small.

"A deliberate attack was made on the residential town of Eastbourne, where damage was caused and several persons were fatally injured. The casualties included some deaths in the service personnel which were caused at R.A.F. air-dromes, at one of which considerable damage was done to a building.

"Although full reports are not yet available, the total number of enemy aircraft now known to have been destroyed yesterday is 71 planes. Eighteen British fighters were lost, but of these 10 pilots are safe."

It was considered noteworthy that this announcement marked the first time British authorities have alleged that a town was "deliberately" attacked by German bombers, although apartment houses and churches have been destroyed and civilians killed and wounded in previous German raids.

Scores of bombs were dropped on Eastbourne, which was twice raided, the first time by nine bombers which broke off from a German formation estimated at 150 planes and demolished two houses. Fifty other Eastbourne houses were damaged. Two of the bombers were reported shot down.

While the officially announced toll of German planes in yesterday's battles remained at 71, it was estimated unofficially that this figure might rise to 90 when all reports are received.

British authorities said that the German raiders scored no important military successes to show for these terrific losses.

Although fires were ignited in the London suburban zone and various houses, shops and other buildings were wrecked, London itself was untouched and its defensive system remained intact, these sources claimed.

Individual formations of as many as 150 planes were used to attack the London zone and other areas throughout England, with an estimated total of 2,000 to 2,500 Nazi bombers and fighters in action.

Thirty or 40 bombs were unloaded on one London suburb while about 26 struck another, starting fires which were checked by fire brigades.

Most of those killed were adults, but some children were among the injured. One explosion tore off the hands of a young girl, British sources said.

In the main, it was asserted, air-dromes, factories and transport and military sectors in the London district suffered no appreciable damage, although one railway station was bombed and wrecked and some small factories were demolished.

The Air Ministry News Service said several attacks yesterday were directed against R.A.F. air-dromes, mainly concentrated in southeast England.

This agency said the biggest success of the day was scored by a British Hurricane squadron which caught 11 Junkers dive-bombers attacking one R.A.F. field, shooting down all of them. In addition, the same squadron probably destroyed several other Nazi planes, it was claimed.

SPECIAL TRAINS, CARS POUR INTO NOMINEE'S TOWN

was of deep significance to American voters. It was of only slightly less importance in foreign capitals.

A 35-minute speech provided the occasion; Elwood supplied the setting and staged the show.

The flood of visitors was expected to reach the staggering total of 250,000. It began yesterday, mounted hour by hour during the night and hit its peak today. So dense was the swarm of cars that motorists proceeded at a snail's pace. By mid-morning it required more than four hours to drive here from Indianapolis—a distance of 40 miles.

Nearly 1,000 police officers, including a detachment of Indiana state police and squads from nine mid-western cities, sought to control the traffic. They were aided by two patrol planes which flew back and forth overhead and communicated with the ground force by radio.

Only "official" cars, including newsmen, radio representatives and political leaders, were permitted to enter the city. Others were directed around the outskirts to Callaway Park, scene of the notification ceremonies at 3 p. m. For the early birds 30,000 seats were available, facing the huge speakers' stand on which the nominee and his official party, scores of political big-wigs and members of the notification committee which consisted of representatives from every state, Alaska, the Philippines, Puerto Rico and Hawaii, 1,000 persons in all, will sit.

Special trains thundered to a stop every 10 minutes at the usually quiet junction of the Nickel Plate and Pennsylvania railroads in the heart of the city. It was all passenger traffic that made Elwood the railroad center of the nation for a day. Freight trains disappeared from tracks in this area at 7 o'clock last night.

Three circus elephants plodded slowly at the head of a Cincinnati delegation of 1,500 citizens, including U. S. Senator Robert A. Taft, one of Willkie's rivals for the presidential nomination at the party's Philadelphia convention.

Pictures of Willkie everywhere testified to Elwood's pride in its favorite son, the pride in fact of all Indiana in the first native Hoosier ever to be nominated for the presidency by a major political party.

being 539 German planes down to 130 R. A. F. machines, with 39 R. A. F. pilots from these planes safe.

The British attitude could not better be illustrated than by the fact that today, when by all signs and portents there may be bigger and better blows at Britain, the people went off on their week ends exactly as usual.

Only exceptions were munitions workers who are working the clock 'round, those directly concerned with the war effort and the armed force, who today maintained more than customary alertness.

If anything, British civilians are not reacting sufficiently to the fact that today, when by all signs and portents there may be bigger and better blows at Britain, the people went off on their week ends exactly as usual.

The German war of nerves, however, continues in the form of a new flood of so-called neutral news agency reports from Tokyo, and similar points, forecasting that London will fall within the next few days.

From the point of view of operations, the most interesting development of yesterday's raids was the new German technique of crossing the British coast-lines in fairly heavy waves and then splitting into small formations, dispersed to keep the R. A. F. fighters employed over the widest possible area and to interfere with production throughout the largest possible area.

HOTEL BUILT IN 1744, SOLD

BURLINGTON, N. J.—The Steamboat Hotel, built in 1744 and bombed by the British in 1778, has ended its career as a public hostelry. Originally called the Sheppard Hotel, the building has been sold to a social club. The structure still retains evidences of the shellfire to which it was subjected in May, 1778, by British frigates anchored in the Delaware River. It got its present name when it became a terminal for a steamboat line between Burlington and Philadelphia.

34 ENTRIES IN EVENT

Starting Ramp Speeds Up Friday Joust Sponsored By Daily Herald

Carl Tigner, 377 Weldon Avenue, raced down Pickaway Street hill Friday afternoon to beat Paul Eitel, Route 3, Circleville, in the annual Nail Keg Derby speed event. The Tigner had followed his competitor all the way down the hill and then passed him within inches of the finish line.

Marion Sowers, 218 East Corwin Street, placed third in the speed event. Prizes of $5 and $2.50 in merchandise and two theatre tickets were awarded to the first, second and third place winners respectively.

SINGLE CASUALTY

Robert Walton, 218 East Corwin Street, was the Derby's only casualty. He caught his hand in a wheel and suffered a deep cut.

Winners in the free-for-all race, including all 34 entries in two heats, were Olen Conner and Paul Crawford, 125 Walnut Street, while winners of qualifying heats included Marion Sowers; Mack Young, 378 East Mound Street; Paul Helwagen, 233 East Main Street, Carl Tigner, 377 Weldon Avenue; Paul Eitel Route 3, Circleville; James Sensenbrenner, 313 East Mound Street; Neil Leatherwood, Ashville, and Herman Diltz, 380 East Walnut Street. Each received one theatre ticket.

The event was sponsored by The Daily Herald, which donated the merchandise prizes.

Judges of the race were Dan McClain, Delos Marcy and Joe Adkins, Jr. A crowd of more than 400 persons lined both sides of Pickaway Street to watch the event.

Derby officials felt that the starting ramp, constructed by the WPA Recreation Department greatly increased the fairness of the event and gave all drivers an even start.

fighting (bombing) squadrons to reach their objectives.

"Last night British planes penetrating Reich territory attacked several places with moderate effect. Some apartment houses were hit by bombs and two civilians were killed and several injured.

"Yesterday's enemy losses totalled 89, of which 59 were destroyed in air battles, 23 on the ground and seven by anti-aircraft fire during the night.

"Twenty-two barrage balloons were set on fire. Thirty one German planes are missing.

German submarines sank several strongly armed merchant vessels totalling 25,700 tons including a tanker of 5,700 tons."

German sources said the Nazi planes which raided the London region yesterday left numerous fires in their wake, causing severe damage to defense works around the British capital.

An official announcement late this morning said that 89 British planes were destroyed during yesterday's fierce combats over the London region and other sections of Britain. Twenty-seven German planes were lost, the statement said.

In addition, it was claimed, the Germans destroyed 22 barrage balloons and one British destroyer.

An earlier announcement said that German fighting planes have been ordered to refrain from engaging in air battles and to concentrate on protecting German bombers from enemy attacks.

Berlin authorities added that no figures have been given out on the number of planes which participated in yesterday's attacks.

Illustrating the extent of the raids, Berlin sources quoted one returning Nazi pilot as stating that his flight group of 18 Junkers dive-bombers alone dumped 50 tons of explosives on airplane factories west of London.

In addition, it was announced, the British airport at Lee-on-Solent was bombed and its hangars set on fire. Several planes on the ground were said to have been destroyed.

Five hangars were set on fire at the Gosport airport, the German statement said, and three planes were destroyed on the ground.

Another announcement said anti-aircraft batteries repulsed a British air attack on an air-drome in northwestern France and that no bombs were dropped.

Two British planes were shot down by groundfire at Bretagne, it was claimed, and three members of the crews were saved.

England. Otherwise very little damage was caused.

"An enemy bomber was shot down by anti-aircraft guns into the channel during the early hours of the morning."

75 Raiders Destroyed

The air ministry announced that at least 75 German raiders were knocked down, while only 22 British combat planes were admitted lost in the tremendous sky clashes yesterday, involving an estimated 2,000 planes or more.

During the night one enemy plane dropped nine bombs on a residential district in a southwestern English coastal town, damaging a number of houses but causing no casualties, authorities said.

Earlier a number of bombs were dropped on various points in Wales.

A number of houses were partially demolished during the night raids on Wales and several casualties were caused. One person was reported killed.

Some of the bombs fell on a Welsh coastal town. There was no anti-aircraft fire.

Two bombs fell on the main square of another Welsh town, damaging houses and smashing the windows of three hotels, while another bomb dropped near a bridge, causing several casualties.

Fire broke out but was quickly extinguished. A woman near the scene commented: "It was remarkable that no one was killed. One woman fell from her bedroom into the room below, but she was not seriously hurt."

Residential Town Raided

The latest communique of the Air and Home Security Ministries charged that the Germans had made a "deliberate" raid on Eastbourne, a southeast coast residential town.

"On several occasions yesterday evening waves of aircraft crossed the coasts but most of them scattered over a wide area. They dropped bombs at many points in the country districts of Hertfordshire, Essex, Surrey, Hampshire and Oxfordshire, but little damage was done.

"Some people were injured. Reports so far received indicate the number killed was small.

"A deliberate attack was made on the residential town of Eastbourne, where damage was caused and several persons were fatally injured. The casualties included some deaths in the service personnel which were caused at R.A.F. airdromes, at one of which considerable damage was done to a building.

"Although full reports are not yet available, the total number of enemy aircraft now known to have been destroyed yesterday is 71 planes. Eighteen British fighters were lost, but of these 10 pilots are safe."

It was considered noteworthy that this announcement marked the first time British authorities have alleged that a town was 'deliberately' attacked by German bombers, although apartment houses and churches have been destroyed and civilians killed and wounded in previous German raids.

Scores of bombs were dropped on Eastbourne, which was twice raided, the first time by nine bombers which broke off from a German formation estimated at 150 planes and demolished two houses. Fifty other Eastbourne houses were damaged. Two of the bombers were reported shot down.

While the officially announced toll of German planes in yesterday's battles remained at 71, it was estimated unofficially that this figure might rise to 90 when all reports are received.

British authorities said that the German raiders scored no important military successes to show for these terrific losses.

Although fires were ignited in the London suburban zone and various houses, shops and other buildings were wrecked. London itself was untouched and its defensive system remained intact, these sources claimed.

Individual formations of as many as 150 planes were used to attack the London zone and other areas throughout England, with an estimated total of 2,000 to 2,500 Nazi bombers and fighters in action.

Thirty or 40 bombs were unloaded on one London suburb while about 26 struck another, starting fires which were checked by fire brigades.

Most of those killed were adults, but some children were among the injured. One explosion tore off the hands of a young girl, British sources said.

In the main, it was asserted, airdromes, factories and transport and military sectors in the London district suffered no appreciable damage, although one railway station was bombed and wrecked and some small factories were demolished.

The Air Ministry News Service said several attacks yesterday were directed against R.A.F. airdromes, mainly concentrated in southeast England.

This agency said the biggest success of the day was scored by a British Hurricane squadron which caught 11 Junkers dive-bombers attacking one R.A.F. field, shooting down all of them. In addition, the same squadron probably destroyed several other Nazi planes, it was claimed.

SPECIAL TRAINS, CARS POUR INTO NOMINEE'S TOWN

was of deep significance to American voters. It was of only slightly less importance in foreign capitals.

A 35-minute speech provided the occasion; Elwood supplied the setting and staged the show.

The flood of visitors was expected to reach the staggering total of 250,000. It began yesterday, mounted hour by hour during the night and hit its peak today. So dense was the swarm of cars that motorists proceeded at a snail's pace. By mid-morning it required more than four hours to drive here from Indianapolis—a distance of 40 miles.

Nearly 1,000 police officers, including a detachment of Indiana state police and squads from nine mid-western cities, sought to control the traffic. They were aided by two patrol planes which flew back and forth overhead and communicated with the ground force by radio.

Ceremony at 3

Only "official" cars, including newsmen, radio representatives and political leaders, were permitted to enter the city. Others were directed around the outskirts to Callaway Park, scene of the notification ceremonies at 3 p. m. For the early birds 30,000 seats were available, facing the huge speakers' stand on which the nominee and his official party, scores of political big-wigs and members of the notification committee which consisted of representatives from every state, Alaska, the Philippines, Puerto Rico and Hawaii, 1,000 persons in all, will sit.

Special trains thundered to a stop every 10 minutes at the usually quiet junction of the Nickel Plate and Pennsylvania railroads in the heart of the city. It was all passenger traffic that made Elwood the railroad center of the nation for a day. Freight trains disappeared from tracks in this area at 7 o'clock last night.

Three circus elephants plodded slowly at the head of a Cincinnati delegation of 1,500 citizens, including U. S. Senator Robert A. Taft, one of Willkie's rivals for the presidential nomination at the party's Philadelphia convention.

Pictures of Willkie everywhere testified to Elwood's pride in fact of all Indians in the first native Hoosier ever to be nominated for the presidency by a major political party.

school where he received his early education and souvenirs of every description were sold at a hundred tent-stands in the downtown area and a similar number at Callaway Park.

The day's activities opened at 10 a. m. with the start of a four-hour, informal entertainment program at the notification grounds. Willkie's special train arrived from Rushville (Ind.) at noon, he was to speak informally from a platform in front of the high school at 2 p. m., and then proceed to Callaway Park for the notification ceremonies.

10,000 at High School

About 10,000 persons, most of them homefolks, moseyed over to the high school last night for a sort of war-up celebration.

It was a homey, shirt-sleeved occasion, with boys riding over on their bikes to shout encouragement to school-mates of the Elwood High School band, and mothers wheeling their youngsters over and parking the buggies.

Walter O'Keefe, the radio comedian from Notre Dame University, was master of ceremonies and kept the crowd in stitches.

MOTHER, SQUAD SAVE BOY SHOCKED BY ELECTRICITY

COLUMBUS, August 17 — Rescued by his mother from a bathtub where he had suffered severe electrical shock, 14-year-old Russell G. Means, Jr., was reported in good condition today by his father, Dr. Russell G. Means, prominent Columbus physician.

The boy had arranged a reading lamp over the tub, where he was reclining to escape the heat, when the lamp fell in, he reached for it, and was shocked when the water short-circuited the connection.

Mrs. Means said the youth had stopped breathing when pulled from the tub. He was revived by the suburban Upper Arlington fire department inhalator squad.

being 539 German planes down to 130 R. A. F. machines, with 39 R. A. F. pilots from these planes safe.

The British attitude could not better be illustrated than by the fact that today, when by all signs and portents there may be bigger and better blows at Britain, the people went off on their week ends exactly as usual.

Only exceptions were munitions workers who are working the clock 'round, those directly concerned with the war effort and the armed force, who today maintained more than customary alertness.

If anything, British civilians are not reacting sufficiently to what is certainly a very real danger, and the press today condemns the foolhardiness of tens of thousands who refuse to go to shelters but climb on roofs to have a look.

The German war of nerves, however, continues in the form of a new flood of so-called neutral news agency reports from Tokyo and similar points, forecasting that London will fall within the next few days.

From the point of view of operations, the most interesting development of yesterday's raids was the new German technique of crossing the British coastlines in fairly heavy waves and then splitting into small formations, dispersed to keep the R. A. F. fighters employed over the widest possible area and to interfere with production throughout the largest possible area.

HOTEL BUILT IN 1744, SOLD

BURLINGTON, N. J.,—The Steamboat Hotel, built in 1744 and bombed by the British in 1778, has ended its career as a public hostelry. Originally called the Shepherd Hotel, the building has been sold to a social club. The structure still retains evidences of the shellfire to which it was subjected in May, 1778, by British frigates anchored in the Delaware River. It got its present name when it became a terminal for a steamboat line between Burlington and Philadelphia.
